Did You Know....

Bottle cap invention: William Painter was the guy who invented bottle caps back in 1892. To prove the bottle caps worked, he convinced a brewer in his native Baltimore to ship hundreds of cases of beer to South America and back. They returned without a leak.

Funny start: Adam Sandler, one of America's favorite funny men, got his start writing skits for "Saturday Night Live" in 1990. His sketches were often too eccentric for the cast to pull off, so Sandler would do them himself. He eventually became the extremely popular "Opera Man".

Publishing first: It's believed the first book ever printed was The Diamond Sutra, from A.D. 868. It was found by archeologists in the Caves of the Thousand Buddhas at Kansu, China.

Not a pig: The Guinea-pig is not from Guinea, nor is it a pig. It is related to a type of rodent commonly found in burrows and rock holes in the Andes Mountains of South America.

Price increase: A trip on New York's subway cost a nickel when it opened in 1904. In 1953, tokens were introduced because the turnstiles wouldn't take both the dime and the nickel required for the increased fare of 15 cents.
